Back to Basics with Big Ron

Purpose: Build the official home for the existing four-part workout series. Help visitors watch the videos, understand Big Ron's approach, and join his email list.

Direction for Manish
Use the customer-facing copy in this brief verbatim. Implement the instructions around it. Do not improvise headlines, claims, offers, or exercise advice. If an asset or factual detail is missing, flag that specific item for Ron.

Audience and brand

Speak primarily to men who want to build muscle and train with purpose, including Big Ron's established audience of adults 35+. Keep the language useful, direct, and welcoming. Use the series name Back to Basics with Big Ron and the personal name Big Ron Jones. Use Ron's supplied BIGRONJONES® brand artwork without recreating it.

Launch scope

• Five core pages: homepage, /chest-day/, /back-and-shoulders/, /leg-day/, and /arm-day/. Add /privacy/ as a required supporting page. About and signup remain homepage sections.

• Use Manish's familiar platform, one episode template, the existing YouTube videos, approved photos, and the existing email platform where practical. Match Ron's supplied brand colors and typography; the styling of this brief is not a new brand specification.

• Keep this launch focused. No store, memberships, custom accounts, new checkout, paid funnel, or downloadable workout plan is included. Do not change existing program pages or testimonials.

Domain and dependencies

Proposed domain: backtobasicswithbigron.com. I cannot confirm ownership, availability, or a live deployment from the supplied PDF. Build on a preview URL until Ron confirms the purchased domain. Use the final domain consistently in links, emails, metadata, and redirects.

Needed before launch: domain/access, approved branding and photo, email account/sender details, contact address, privacy information, and approval of any episode notes. Do not publish credential or historical claims until verified.

Definition of success

A visitor on a phone can watch any episode without signing up, move through the whole series, and subscribe successfully. Manish delivers a tested site and a working email flow. Search visibility and subscriber growth are measured outcomes, not promised results.

Homepage: exact copy

Layout order: header → hero → series cards → Meet Big Ron → email signup → footer. Use anchors /#watch, /#about, and /#join. Keep one H1 and a clear, prominent Watch Episode 1 button on mobile.

Header and hero
Wordmark / H1: Back to Basics with Big Ron
Navigation: Watch the Series | Meet Big Ron | Join the List
Subtitle: Build muscle. Make the basics count.
Intro: You don’t need to make training more complicated to take it seriously. Join me for a four-part workout series covering chest, back and shoulders, legs, and arms. Watch the videos, learn from the demonstrations, and bring a clear focus to your next workout.
Primary button: Watch Episode 1 → /chest-day/
Secondary button: Join the Email List → /#join

Series section / #watch
Heading: Your Back to Basics workout series
Copy: Start with chest day and work through the series, or choose the episode you want to watch below.
Card titles: Episode 1: Chest Day | Episode 2: Back and Shoulders | Episode 3: Leg Day | Episode 4: Arm Day
Card button: Watch Episode
Playlist link: Watch the Full Series on YouTube

Use four real video thumbnails with visible episode numbers. Link each card to its episode page. Use the playlist URL on page 3. Do not embed four players on the homepage or autoplay video.

Meet Big Ron / #about
Heading: Meet Big Ron Jones
Copy: I’m Big Ron Jones. My approach is practical: understand the basics, train with purpose, and build habits you can keep. Back to Basics gives you a look at how I train and explain the work. Start with an episode, then stay connected for more training content.
Button: Visit My YouTube Channel

Use an approved portrait or training photo. This version avoids unverified certification details and “over 20 years” claims. Credentials can be added later using Ron’s confirmed wording.

Email section / #join
Heading: Keep building with Big Ron
Copy: Join my email list for Back to Basics updates and practical training content.
Button: Join Big Ron’s List

Footer links: YouTube | Privacy Policy | Contact. Use Ron’s confirmed copyright owner and contact details. Exercise note: “These videos are educational. Choose exercises and loads appropriate to your experience and health. Stop if you experience pain.”

Video assets and routes

Source status: These URLs and episode associations are carried forward from the supplied brief, including its embedded playlist hyperlink. I cannot confirm current playback, titles, upload dates, or embedding permissions. Manish must verify each before launch. Do not state the videos' age.

Asset checks

Confirm that each video matches its assigned topic and plays while signed out. Use the real thumbnail. Record verified video title, thumbnail URL, duration, and upload date for metadata. If a video is unavailable or embeds are disabled, flag it to Ron; do not silently substitute another video.

Episode template and copy

Template order: header → “Back to the Series” link to /#watch → H1 → intro → responsive player → Watch on YouTube → reviewed notes (if ready) → episode navigation → email signup → footer. Keep the player prominent near the top, with a descriptive iframe title and full-screen controls.

Exact episode introductions
Chest: Start with chest day. Watch the first episode, follow the demonstrations, and continue through the series at your own pace.
Back and shoulders: Next up: back and shoulders. Watch the second episode and follow the demonstrations before moving on to leg day.
Legs: It’s leg day. Watch the third episode, then continue to the final episode for arms.
Arms: Finish the series with arm day. Watch the final episode, revisit any session, and join my list to stay connected.

Make the next step explicit

Page	Previous link	Primary next action
Chest	Back to the Series	Next: Back and Shoulders
Back and shoulders	Previous: Chest Day	Next: Leg Day
Legs	Previous: Back and Shoulders	Next: Arm Day
Arms	Previous: Leg Day	Watch the Series Again

Previous/next links use the paths on page 3. “Watch the Series Again” returns to /#watch. Episode 4 also shows “Join Big Ron’s List” linking to that page’s signup form. All episode forms use the same audience and email flow.

Written notes: publish only reviewed material

Review each actual video or a checked transcript. Prepare a concise summary, exercises demonstrated, useful cues, and timestamps where helpful. Include sets, reps, loads, or frequency only when explicitly stated. Ron reviews training details before publication. If notes are not ready, omit the notes section and launch the accurate video page; never publish empty headings or filler.

Exact search metadata

Signup and welcome email

Use one audience in Ron’s existing email platform. Tag subscribers by the Back to Basics source and, where supported, episode page. Do not create duplicate subscriber records or change existing automations without reviewing how this flow connects to them.

Exact form labels and consent
Required label: Email Address
Optional label: First Name (optional)

Consent: By subscribing, you agree to receive Back to Basics updates and training emails from Big Ron Jones. You can unsubscribe anytime. Read our Privacy Policy.
Invalid email: Please enter a valid email address.
Submission error: We couldn’t complete your signup. Please try again.

Use the message that matches the actual flow
If email confirmation is required: Check your inbox to confirm your email address. Once confirmed, you’ll be on Big Ron’s list.
After confirmation, or successful direct subscription: You’re on the list. Start watching Back to Basics below.
Button: Watch Episode 1 → /chest-day/

Use the provider’s native confirmation process and accessible status messages. Show success only after the provider accepts the signup. Send the welcome email once the subscriber meets the platform’s subscription requirements. Test a new address, an existing subscriber, a failed submission, confirmation, and unsubscribe.

Glad you’re here.

Back to Basics is a four-part workout series covering chest, back and shoulders, legs, and arms. Start with Episode 1, or choose the session you want to watch.

Start watching: [FINAL HOMEPAGE URL]/#watch

I’ll share Back to Basics updates and practical training content here. Keep showing up and make the basics count.

Big Ron

Replace [FINAL HOMEPAGE URL] before sending. Include the provider’s unsubscribe link and required sender details. Use Ron’s confirmed sending address/name. Configure provider-required authentication without overwriting unrelated existing mail records. No daily cadence, free plan, results, or personal reply commitment is promised.

Privacy page

Publish a separate /privacy/ page linked beside every form and in the footer. Its text must describe the actual operator, contact method, collected fields, email purpose/provider, embedded video services, analytics/cookies if used, and unsubscribe process. Manish must use an accurate existing notice or obtain approved text once the services are known. This brief does not invent legal boilerplate or claim compliance.

Search and measurement

Required implementation

• After domain confirmation, choose one HTTPS hostname. Redirect HTTP and the alternate www/non-www hostname to it. Give every page a self-referencing canonical URL. Keep preview pages out of search, then remove preview noindex settings from the public launch.

• Public pages must return HTTP 200 and be accessible without login. Include all six public pages in the XML sitemap. Check robots rules, broken links, titles, descriptions, and social previews. Search Console verification uses Ron-owned access.

• Each episode is a dedicated watch page with one main video. Make the embed discoverable in rendered HTML; avoid loading it only after a click. Use stable, crawlable thumbnails. If consent controls are needed, test their effect on users and rendered-page discovery. [1]

• Add accurate WebSite and Person data. Use verified official profile URLs. Add VideoObject data per episode with verified name, description, thumbnailUrl, uploadDate, and embedUrl; add duration when verified. Do not label a YouTube watch URL as a video-file contentUrl. Validate with the Rich Results Test. [1, 2]

• Submit the sitemap and inspect public URLs in Search Console. Request indexing where appropriate, then monitor reported issues. Repeated requests do not accelerate crawling; indexing, video features, and rankings are not guaranteed. [3]

Performance and accessibility

Compress photos; reserve image/player space; use readable type, clear focus states, form labels, and keyboard-operable controls. Check layout at 375px width and on desktop. Avoid horizontal scrolling and autoplay. Keep the homepage light; do not delay an episode’s main player solely for cosmetic effects.

Measurement and review

Use Search Console plus Ron’s existing analytics where suitable. Track watch_episode_click (with episode number), youtube_outbound_click, signup_accepted, and subscription_confirmed where the provider supports reliable confirmation tracking. Do not count button clicks as subscriptions. Never send names or email addresses to analytics.

Record the launch date and reporting baseline. At the first review, roughly 30 days later, report search impressions/clicks, landing-page traffic, CTA clicks, and unique accepted/confirmed subscribers. Signup conversion = unique completed signups ÷ measured signup-page visitors × 100. State whether the numerator is accepted or confirmed and whether visitor tracking is limited by consent or blocking. Set targets after baseline data exists.

Launch and handover

Work sequence

1. Prepare: Confirm platform, domain, branding, video access, and email details. Build the six-page preview with final copy.
2. Verify: Test videos, navigation, signup/email flow, privacy text, metadata, and mobile usability. Ron reviews any exercise notes and unresolved factual details.
3. Launch: Connect the confirmed domain, verify public settings, submit the sitemap, and provide the handover below. Publish promotional copy only when the live destination works.

Manish’s acceptance checklist

☐ Six public pages are complete; the exact copy is used, and no placeholders remain.

☐ All four video/topic pairings, embeds, thumbnails, playlist, and channel links are verified while signed out.

☐ Episode 1 → 2 → 3 → 4 works; Episode 4 offers a clear return to the series and signup.

☐ Every signup form works; new/existing subscribers, errors, confirmation if used, welcome email, and unsubscribe are tested.

☐ Privacy text matches the installed services; sender identity and provider-required details are present.

☐ Mobile and desktop checks pass: readable text, keyboard access, usable controls, no clipping or horizontal overflow.

☐ HTTPS, redirects, canonicals, metadata, sitemap, robots rules, rendered video, and structured data are checked.

☐ Search Console ownership is verified, sitemap submitted, and inspection findings documented. Indexing is not a launch prerequisite.

☐ Analytics events and source tags are tested; private subscriber data is excluded from analytics.

☐ Credentials, dates, training details, affiliations, and results are accurate. No competitor-name targeting or unsupported origin claims appear.

Handover to Ron

Deliver the live URL, page/link inventory, test results, any remaining issues, and simple editing instructions for episode cards, videos, and email copy. List the platform, domain renewal, email provider, recurring costs, and account owners. Ron must retain ownership and administrator access; use secure invitations rather than passwords in this document.

Launch promotion: exact copy

Social / YouTube Community post
Back to Basics has a new home. Chest, back and shoulders, legs, and arms, all in one place. Watch the four-part series and join my email list for more practical training content.

Start here: [FINAL HOMEPAGE URL]

YouTube description / pinned comment: “Watch the full Back to Basics series and join my email list here: [FINAL HOMEPAGE URL].” Replace the placeholder, then add the link to the playlist, four video descriptions, and the YouTube profile. Ron or his authorized channel manager publishes these updates.
